We were struck with surprise at the large number of logs that were being rafted down. I don't think it is exaggerating to say that thousands of rafts went down last year (1886). These logs are rafted to Foodhow to supply the needs of the lower Min and also to ship to other parts f China. I have soon our Poochow loga in Tientsin and even in Paking. The great number of fires the past year in various ports of China is the probable cause of the increase of rafting This region has also had its shares of fires. Ta Kan, Shaoya, Tsiang Loh, and Na Ken have suffered a good deal. So many fires occurring simultaneously over the country cannot fail to Shaowu, situated on the right bank of the middle branch of the Min, is a Fu city of some fifty thousand inhabitants made up mostly of natives with an admixture of Kiang Si and Foochow traders and artisans. The city is country-The great event of 1886 was the coming of the Governor-General on the 21st December. He came via Ting Chin. The day following his arrival was the military review, to which all the people flocked, and the next day, December 23rd, he continued his journey to Kien Yang, from which place he would go to Kien Ning Fu and Yen Ping.

It may not be out of place to notice some of the differences in the living between Shaowu and Foochew. First, Cows milk. Ten years ago such a thing was not known here as an artiele of diet. We first bought a cow and taught a Mohammedan butcher low to milk. After a while he engaged to supply us will milk at the rate of about six white-wine vinegar bottles for one dollar; or about one half less than we are allowed by the native milkmen in Foochow. This is owing mainly to two causes. One is the cows here are smaller and give only from one half to two thirds as much milk as the cows in Foochow. The other reason is the grazing season is shorter and the feeding season much longer making it more expensive keeping cows. The natives are learning to use milk and it is peddled out at ten cash an ounce, or about fourteen cents a pint. Beef-The native beef here is inferior to that at Foochow in both flavour and tenderness. The cost, eight cents per lb., is about the same. The mutton is good but the season short. The Kinng-si shepherds bring over several droves about the end of November and kill them off as fast as possible, so as to get home to spend the China New Year. The price is from twelve to fourteen cents per lb. The wild park here is very good indeed, and sold for about ten cents per lb. Teal and wild ducks are plenty in the river but seidom found in the market. Wild pigeon pheasant, ventson, and sion anent the Jubilee Memorial had somewhat tiger meat can be had in times. He referred at considerable length to the worship paid to the fox, weasel, hedgehog, and make, to which at Tientsin is added the rat. The first four are called the four immortals. These deified animals seem to usurp the entire attention of the people even to the exclusion of the Buddhist and Taolst gods. Various fairy tales, were told, illustrating superstitions of the people in regard to these animals. They may be fictions, as Dr. Martin remarked to us, but they are sincerely believed in by the Chinese. Dry, cold science, he said, will never reach the people and uproot their absurd notions. Christianity alone can do this. Excepting the making of the Golden Calf, the Hebrews were wonderfully kept free from animal worship, although they had emerged from a land. Egypt, which was flowing with worship for such beasts, as was remarked by the Chairmin, Dr. Blodget. He found city literati who did not believe at all in these things, and country people from all parts who were firm believers ! in the same and were prepared to quote instances in their own districts and families. Dr. Edkins quoted from the classics to prove that animal worship, or, as he preferred to term it, superstition, was unknown in ancient tives, and he went on to say in conclusion that what was wanted was western science and a knowledge of Theology to dissipate such errors. Mr. Hancock stated his own experiences in a Marilla racy speech with regard to foxes, snakes, weasels, linguag... etc., on the walls of Peking, the sofas of the Nan-Kuan (Customs mon), on the top of the Little Wu-tai-hon, and in Haman. Mr. Ferguson referred to the similarity of such notions prevailing in China with customs in West Africa. Dr. Dudgeon thought the paper not at all exhaustive, it being a mistake to suppose with the lecturer that animal worship was confined to the four genii-the spirits of the for, wensel, hedgehog, and anake. He pointed out that the horse, cow, dog, insects, dragon, lion, black and white tiger, etc., are worshipped. The paper had not treated of the four ling, including the phoenix. unicorn or chilin, dragon and tortoise, and of the five poisonous animals worshipped in the fifth.moon, including the scorpion, lizard, centipade, frog, and snake, which had either been not mentioned or passed by with a single reference He disputed the statement that the hare in the moon was only worshipped in the moon and not on the earth on the 15th of the 8th moon. He spoke of the events connected with the for some years ago in the Capital, when the extensive robberies from the palace roofs, etc., took place, and of the desth of one of the British escort who was supposed by the Chinese to have been killed by a for. He was not astonished at the liking of the immortals for whisky, as stated in the paper, as it was a question of the possession of spirits, and he poked fun at the lecturer on his temperature visit to a grave-mound (fun in Chinese) to wit- Humidity ..... ness worship paid at the month of a rat's hole. Direction of wind ... Each speaker contributed reminiscences from Force of wind ....... the Chinese of these superstitions. Dr. Martin strongly contradicted Dr. Edkins' position that animal worship was modern, because not mentioned or announced by Confucius; the negative argument of the learned sinologue he said fell to the ground. He spoke of Han-wen-king's prayer to the crocodile, which every youth in Peking knew by heart, and he believed that atimal worship existed to a much greater extent in ancient than in modern times. Christianity, not science, was the remedy. Mr. Pilcher quoted instances of animal worship among the country people around Peking and at Tientsin. All the speakers agreed as to the interest of this subject, and that a great deal-more was to be learned regarding it.

INGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNT AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of loreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises forstudents of a most instructive nature: Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the secents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the enccess of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterised Chinese publications. To the illustrate the vast scope of the work ollowing facts are submitted for consideration :-

Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medburst's English on FRIDAY, the 18th instant and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese charactes. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to diplay the various applications and equivalents of different words which THE Steamship have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherse pub. J. Thearle, Commander, will be despatched for

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted.
To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-It comprises upwards of two thousand large

EXTRACT. AN EX-AMERICAN MINISTER ON THE END OF THE SIEGE OF PARIS. At nine o'clock in the forenoon of March German army entered the Porte Maillot, proceeded un the Avenue of the Grand Army, and walked their horses slowly down the with carbinos cocked and fingers upon the trigger. These hussare looked carefully into the side streets, and proceeded slowly down the avenue. But few people were out at that early hour in the morning. Soon after this, six more hussars made their appearance by the same route, and every few minutes thereafter the number increased. Then came in the main body of the advanced guard, numbering about one thousand men. consisting of cavalry and infantry (Bavarian and Prussian), forming part of the Eleventh Corps, under the command of General Kanamichi. By this time the crowd on the Champs Elysées had increased, and met the advancing Gormans with hisses and insults, with great deliberation, leaded their pieces, whereat the crowd, composed mostly of boys and "roughs," incontinently took to their heels. According to a previous understanding among the French, all the shops and restaurants along the route had been closed; but notwithstanding their vigorous asseverations that no consideration whatever would induce them to look upon or speak to the Prussians, I found, on going down the Champs Elysées at half-past nine o'clock, a large number of them attracted thither by curiosity which HUBBE on the 31st December, 188 . body of the force had halted in front of the Palace of Industry, notwithstanding the Hongkong & China, 14th February, 1887. |401 vehement protestations that had been made that no Frenchman, would look at or speak children—in the most cordial fraternisation to Sign our Firm per procuration. with the German soldiers. Stopping for a mement to listen to the agreeable conversation which appeared to be carried on, a German soldier advanced to salute me, and addressed meby name. He turned out to be the clerk at a hotel at Homburg les Bains, where I had lodged during my visit to that place in 1867 great body of the German troops were reviewed by the Emperor at Long Champs, before their entry into Paris. Instead, thereten o'clock, as had been previously announced, it was not until half-past one o'clock in the afternoon that the Royal Guard of Pruslight blue coats, who were succeeded by the Bavarian riflemen, with their heavy uniform and martial tread. Afterward followsound of the Bismarch cuiragsiers, with their white inckets, black bats, and waying plumes, recalling to mind, perhaps, among the more of insulting cries; but as they noured in thicker and faster, and forming by companier, as they swept down the avenue to the strains of martial music, the crowd seemed to be awed into silence, and no other sound was beard but the tramp of the soldiery and marked * the occapional word of command. The only disturbance that I saw was occasioned by some individual advancing from the sidewalk and giving his hand to a German cavalryman, whereat the crowd "went" for him. But his backing seemed so powerful that the discontents soon dispersed without any further disturbance. The entry of the main body of the troops occupied about two hours, and after that they began to disperse into the various quarters of the city to which they had been assigned, in search of their lodgings. BILLETING TROOPS ON FOREIGNERS. At five o'clock I went to see M. Jules! Farre in relation to the sudden and indiscriminate billeting of the German soldiers upon the American residents, and learned from him of the probabilities of the ratification of the treaty of peace by the Assembly at Bordeaux that evening, and of his hopes that everything would be settled before the nest morning, when the German stroops would be withdrawn from the city. He told me that there would be no doubt about the ratification of the treaty. He hoped it would have been ratified the night before, 2432] and thus have prevented the entry of the Germans into Paris at all. But M. Thiers unfortunately had been delayed in reaching DAVID CORSAR & SONS' Bordeaux, and which had postpoued the action on the treaty in the Assembly until that day. M. Favre was kind enough to tell me in this interview that he would send me a notice of the ratification of the treaty the moment be received it; and he kept bit word, for as soon as the matter was compicted he sent me the notice. In returning from the Foreign Office, on the other side of the Seine I found the bridge guarded by French soldiers, who resolutely refused to led me pass. Soon a large crowd of roughs appeared and attempted to force the guard and it appeared for a short sime as if a sharp little battle was to be improvised. After standing around for about an hour I was enabled by the courtesy of a French officer to alip through the guard and finally to reach my residence.
